Juniors! Juniors!

Here we are! See us, hear us, look at us! Did you ever see such a class as the class of '31? We come, we see, we will conquer. Not in the spirit of Cæsar nor like the great Napoleon, but in the true spirit of Tennessee Wesleyan. We have come from all over these United States of ours—from the sea-shores of Florida, from the cotton fields of Georgia and Alabama, from the blue grass regions of Kentucky, from the historic Carolinas and Virginia, from the rich oil fields of Pennsylvania, and from all parts of our own Tennessee. We even have a few from Cuba.

You will find our boys represented on the football field, on the baseball diamond, both boys and girls on the basketball and tennis courts—in fact the Juniors are to be found where there is any kind of athletics. Many Juniors appeared in the plays of the year, in the glee clubs and music recitals. You will find us among the debaters, in the orchestra—yea—everywhere.

We are proud of our first year, but we are looking eagerly ahead when we hope to do more to help build up the spirit of Wesleyan—to climb ever higher. Great in quantity as well as quality the Juniors of '31 feel they have already contributed to the life of our college. We know that the future holds much in store for us, and it is with glad hearts that we look forward to the time when we shall no longer be verdant freshmen, but shall take our place as leaders.

Class History

Tennessee Wesleyan College
January 4, 1951

Dear Wes:—

I've just returned from my first trip to Chicago, accompanying President Davis, (Sticky), on one of his annual begging expeditions.

I had quite a surprise the other day. I stepped into a barber shop for a hair cut and there was "Big Shot" Puett. Do you remember him? He is now owner of a large chain of barber shops. He has married Mary Jo Martin. You remember they were both members of our Junior class in '31.

It brought back memories of our first year in college. How we gathered the first few days in the gym for matriculation. This seemed a process of brow-beating at the hands of the faculty to our confused minds, and the signing for courses of which we had only the vaguest conception. How we were threatened and maltreated by the business manager and the bursar until we had mortgaged everything but our souls to pay the debts we had been forced to contract!

After we passed through that, we were so confused we did not care what came next; but with the kind administration of the faculty and under the directions of the older students we soon regained our sanity and from a confused rabble, changed to a more or less orderly mob. We at last knew where we were going, if not the reason.

Then followed parties and entertainments for our benefit by the different organizations under the kind supervision of myriads of chaperons. We felt quite important until we found that these organizations merely wanted new members to carry on their work for them.

What a cosmopolitan group we were! Native sons of Tennessee, men of the frozen wastes of Michigan, wild savages from the Floridian Jungles, and even foreigners from that far away island called Cuba. And what a versatile bunch came to light. Through the diligent efforts of Mrs. Hale, such talent as Jack Crawford, Robert Thomas, and Thelma Keyes, was brought out. Our actors, Fred Mitchell and Edith Lamons, were brought to the limelight in "Seeking Glory" and "On the Corner of the Campus." Our athletes, "Cookie" and "Blondy" Costner, were discovered in the Junior-Senior basketball game. Our authors, Kay and Gastman, were discovered in Miss Johnson's English class.

Armistice Day, our now nationally known Charles Perry, who was then a mere waiter at Petty, gained his first triumph in oratory, and later Coy Atwell's ability to "bus" dishes came to light.

Sports? Our boys challenged the Seniors to a football game, but they, wise guys, evaded the game on the plea of rain, cold, and vacation. Clever fellows, these Chinese.

The Senior girls came back, however, and ours bowed to defeat in the basketball tilt. But what could be expected of our "freshies" against the 200 lb. "Pee Wee?"

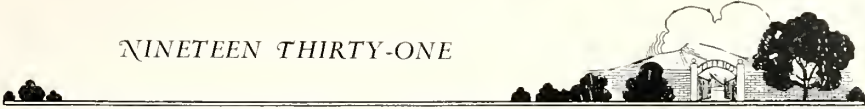

Then the Junior-Senior Banquet, the event of the season, the goal of the year. What a brilliant success!

Well, Wes, I imagine and hope to see you at our twentieth class reunion.

Sincerely,

Le Ann

P.S.—I forgot to tell you I'm living next door to Mr. and Mrs. Howard McDaniels, Jr.

Speed

The banquet was carried out on the ship motif. Guests entered the dining-room Everyone is in a hurry as he hurries about his work. On our campus we see examples of this speedy age. Students hurrying to and from class. Seniors stopping for a moment to discuss class pictures, the play, or the fact that the next year's Seniors can never come up to their standards. There is always so much to do between classes. One must run after a book, fill a date, see someone on important business. All this, of course, between classes. No other time will do. It is no uncommon sight to see both Juniors and Seniors running to a class to which they are already late. The Seniors more so than the Juniors. Perhaps they realize more fully the responsibility that a student has, and to which he must attend or perhaps they realize there is no next year to make up that subject. Anyway they run. When I say Juniors and Seniors I mean some of them. Others wouldn't run if their life depended on it. Of course these are mostly Juniors. As we think of the word speed, and of Juniors and Seniors, we think of the speed with which the Seniors are leaving us Juniors. Leaving us with responsibilities on our shoulders. Leaving us to fill the places they will vacate. Only a short time ago they were as we were when we first came here. Green and timid. They soon relieved us of that feeling by their friendly, helpful attitude. They passed through the stage which we are now in, and to their present positions which we will soon fill. All of it has been done with a swift burst of speed. Rush, rush, rush, all through school to get an education. Rush to get a job, rush to keep it, and last, when we are too old to rush, we may settle back and rest. When we die, we'll be rushed to our grave by train or motor car. There we can rest till judgment. But that's too far off. As it is:

Seniors, we are glad to have you. We're proud of you. You have set a real standard for us to follow. But time is flying. Hurry, we are coming.

Junior-Senior Banquet

The crowning event in the schedule of Junior activities was the Junior-Senior Banquet which took place March second at the Robert E. Lee Hotel. The Juniors entertained the Seniors, the class sponsors, and other members of the faculty, and enjoyed it. On no other occasion has so much enthusiasm, loyalty and originality been manifested.

The banquet as carried out on the ship motif. Guests entered the dining-room over a gang-plank, and shortly after all the guests had filed in, ship's gong was struck. The color scheme was green and white, the Senior class colors. The outstanding feature of decorations was a ship's wheel. Place cards were small green ships.

The program was opened by the singing of "Gold and Blue" after which the Good Ship Gaiety was christened. Toasts carried the ship idea, "to the captain," "to the chief mate," etc. The Senior Class was likened to "Propellers," and we saw far into the future by means of "Spy-glasses."

Not the least part of the program was the music which brought to light some unusual talent among Junior Class members. Dinner music was furnished by our ever-ready Wesleyan Orchestra. The program closed with a toast to the future, un-chartered seas. All hands voted the evening a success.

A Word to Our Faculty

Through the ages men have sung praises to men who have won wars, to those who have painted masterpieces, or written books, to those who have given their lives for a noble cause. But they have forgotten the other lives that live behind those famous ones, the lives that wielded influence over genius, and started it upward in its paths of glory. As far as fame goes the teacher has a small enough part, but in this business of molding lives he plays a mighty role.

Nine months have we labored, studied, planned, played.—A few words of praise have fallen our way from our faculty and many of encouragement. We realize our year has not been as perfect as our dreams. But we're glad we have tried, sorry the time for even a brief rest has come. We know we could not even have achieved those dreams we have without the guidance of our faculty.

So here's to our faculty, whose untiring effort and unflinching sympathy and interest have made Wesleyan a happier place to be. We appreciate you!

All of Life's successes, some one has said, are the fruits of inspiration, or the incentive to untiring effort.

When the class of '32 leaves behind its days of Juniordom to become an august group of Seniors, it will owe any measure of success it may have attained to the brilliant inspiration, the unceasing interest, the sacrifice and loyalty, the friendly leadership of its sponsor, Aileen Templeton.

POSEY ELECTED

The result of yesterday's presidential election shows the closest margin in the nation's history. The president won over his feminine opponent, Miss Blair Allen, a former school mate by only a few votes. Mr. Posey is a former governor of Tennessee.

Miss Allen, who won nation wide fame last year by stuffing an umbrella down the throat of Senator John Crawford of Florida, when he opposed her on a bill, refused to comment on the election this morning. The president announces his intention of waging a nation wide campaign against crime and colleges.

RITTER INSTALLS NEW FIRE ESCAPES

Matron Juanita Grant, of Ritter recently had installed in Ritter, slides leading from the various rooms outside, to be used as fire escapes. Some doubt was entertained as to the advisability of the new plan. Yesterday afternoon the project was given its first trial. School was closed till Tuesday to allow the students to regain consciousness and other personal effects. The project is considered safe.

WASTE BASKETS TO BE INSTALLED

Mayor Knox Williams, who recently slipped on a banana peel on Main Street and sprained his ankle, is today supervising the installation of waste baskets at regular intervals along the main thoroughfares for the use of those who must dine in transit. Mr. Edsell Clark has been one of the main offenders.

ROGERS-HOBACK NUPTIALS

The union in marriage of Edna Rogers and Frank Hoback is one of the season's main events. Miss Rogers, an accomplished actress, and Mr. Hoback, a city traffic policeman are well known here and elsewhere. Their marriage was to have been celebrated in 1931, but the couple decided to give the most important years of their lives to their careers.

SCREEN NEWS

Mr. Fred Mitchell and Miss Ruth Peacock who made their debut a number of years ago in "Seeking Glory" have abandoned their stage careers and gone on the screen. They will first appear in "The Pest." Large crowds gathered to greet them as they stepped off the train this afternoon.

PERSONALS

Mr. Fred Puett, proprietor of a skunk ranch in Texas is visiting friends in the city and brought Miss Mary Jo Martin a fine black animal which Miss Martin expects to take to Paris with her and knock Europe cold.

Mr. Howard McDaniels is also visiting friends during his wife's sojourn in Europe.

THE BACHELORS CLUB

There was an important meeting of the Bachelors Club this noon. A resolution was passed permitting Sam Provost to enter the straits of matrimony providing he pay a fine of $1000 to the club. Members present were Kenneth Magee, Earl A. Arp, Augustus Sharp, Coy Atwell, Robert Thomas, Charles Perry, and James Franks.

CAMPUSOLOGY

It isn't taught from text books,
It's not in the catalogue,
It's not even in the curriculum,
But still it's all around,
It's not a club or frat,
Nor religious enterprise,
But you'll know it when you see
Wandering 'neath campus skies
Couples with calf-like expressions,
Couples with big moon eyes.

They need no instructor
To tell them of the moon,
For they can tell each other,
If they ditch the chaperone.
They have no certain hour to meet
Yet their's is a special class,
We find them mostly out of doors
Mid flowers and trees and grass.
Examples of this course are they
This ladde and his lass.

So here's to you, Campusology
May your activities never cease;
Here's to your age old teachings,
Blessings, and to thee—peace.

SPRING TERM AT WESLEYAN

'Tis the spring term at Wesleyan,
How do I know?
Why, the school-martins are coming,
And the March winds blow.

It's "How many hours in this course,
Do we have a test on that?"
"How do you like that new teacher?
I've heard that she's a cat."

"I want to see Dean Miller
About that physical ed,
If I take it this hot weather
I know that I'll be dead."

"Have you seen Professor Douglas,
I've talked until I'm hoarse,
I want to take twenty-two hours
But he won't let me, of course."

At last they all are settled,
March winds no longer blow,
All is quiet at Wesleyan,
On to victory we will go.

THE LIGHTS OF RITTER

(Apologies to Letts)

I saw the lights of Ritter
As I was passing by,
The bright lights of Ritter
Against a moonlit sky,
My heart was with the Ritter girls,
And I will tell you why—

The hours go slow at Ritter,
Hours that should be gay,
The watchful matrons looked down
On happy girls at play,
But when that last bell sounded,
They put nonsense away.

They left the jolly campus,
The porch swing and the hall,
From quiet nooks in Banfield,
They rushed in, one and all,
And soon there was in Ritter
A silence like a pall.

God rest you, sorry Ritter girls,
Who laid your good times down,
Who gave up freedom (and spring dates)
For the sake of cap and gown,
My sympathy is with you—
As I go on down-town.

POME

Vunce upon a midnight, dearie,
It was twelve o'clock or nearly,
Anyhow it was quite late, eleven, ten or just before,
Vile I nodded, nearly napping,
I tought I hoid nudding hapning,
Like someone was gently wrapping,
Wrapping up ny cloading store,
It's some crook said I, I betcha
Wrapping up my cloading store,
Only this und nudding more.

Ah, distinctly I remember,
It was June or else September
Or maybe it was Tuesday in the year 1904,
So now to still the beating of my hot,
I kept on repeating,
"Tis a customer retreating,"
Dough I couldn't say what for, "I'll bet sore,"
Yes, I will, und maybe more,"
De light I switched on in de store,
Lightness dere und nudding more.

"Pudden me, may I enquire,
Are you bogler, tref, or buyer?"
"Put emup!" und nudding more.
Den my knees began to flutter,
Und my lips began to stutter,
Und I had six million goose bumps,
Six or seven or maybe more.
I could tink, but not so plainly,
I could walk, but so ungainly,
Cause de trouble dot mainly
I vas scared, und vat is more,
I vas scarerden I'd ever been
In all my life before.
My knees vas havin' civil var.

Den he stotted toward me quickly,
Vit a lead pipe wrapped up tickly,
Und he sez "You see dis pipe?
You've gotta buy it, vat is more."
Den I tried my best to holler
Dot I wouldn't pay him dollar,
But he grabbed me by the collar
Und he said, "I just adore to hear an argument
Because dot's vat dis pipe is for,
Just an argument, und nudding more."

Und de moral of dis story
Is if he comes back some more,
Dere's a velcome sign to greet him
At de entrance to my store,
If he comes back und I'm able,
I von't make him miserable.
He von't feel uncomfortable,
Und forgiveness von't implore,
Cause he'll get kinder treatment
Dan he even get before—
Cause my store's insured—
Just dot und nudding more.

—ALBERT ADKINS

EN RAPPORT

A pregnant hush,
Then clamor of leaves,
Rustling of boughs

Scent of pine
Mingling with the freshness of rain
As it slants through the trees.

A sudden rush,
Clap of thunder, streak of lightning,
Tumult—

Rain—storming in swirls
That drench me, and bring Forgetfulness!

—KAY

ECSTASY

Perfume
Of a rose you gave me,
Dreams
Of a garden where we stood,
Music
Of the sea's dull murmur,
Blue of eyes that loved, caressed,
Memories
Throbbing, thrilling near
Ecstasy
Sharp, sweet, bitter—

—KAY

A FRESHMAN'S IDEA OF A SENIOR

"A Senior stood on a railroad track
The train was coming fast,
The train got off the railroad track
To let the Senior pass."

Lives of Seniors all remind us,
We should strive to do our best,
And departing, leave behind us,
Notebooks that will help the rest.

JUNE—When the roses are blooming and Scotchmen are throwing away their Christmas trees.

It isn't the original cost of the dog that counts, it's the pup-keep.

"Why are we late, porter?"

"The train ahead, suh, is behind and we is behind besides."

Miss Johnson:—"What do you think of 'I Penseroso?'"

Joan:—"Best ten cent cigar on the market!"

Then there was the man who whistled in his sleep and woke up to find seven dogs in bed with him.

Gregory:—"Well, at last I've passed history."

Costner:—"Honestly?"

Gregory:—"Aw, don't be inquisitive."

He was bred in old Kentucky, but he's nothing but a crumb down here.

TO A PENCIL.

I know not where thou art,
I only know
That thou wert on my desk
Beautiful and contented
A moment back.
And as I turned my head to view the clock

Some heartless wretch went west with thee.
I know not who he was,
Nor shall I ask.
Perchance,
It may have been the guy
I stole you from.

Temp:—"Gang, the game begins in five minutes, are you gonna fight, or are you gonna lay down?"

Team:—"We will."

Temp:—"What do you mean?"

Team:—"We will not."

Temp:—"Good, that's the old Wesleyan spirit."

Miss Danielson:—"Where were you yesterday?"

Kay:—"I can't think."

Miss D.:—"I know, but where were you?"

No matter how hard we try we still have to get out of bed to come to school!

Farmer (to Boosters):—"Where have you been?"

Edith L.:—"We have been on a Booster Trip."

Farmer:—"Did you catch any?"

An elderly lady walked into a railroad ticket office in Chicago and asked for a ticket to New York.

"Do you wish to go by Buffalo?" asked the ticket agent.

"Certainly not," she replied, "By train, if you please."
